
Symposium SP-1
Saturday, July 29, 2006

New Developments in Media Violence Research

Chair, Brad J. Bushman

Hundreds of studies have shown that violent media increase aggression. It is now time to move past the question of whether violent media increase aggression to ask more important questions, such as what are the processes responsible for violent media-related aggression and who is most likely to become aggressive after exposure to violent media. This symposium looks at important mediators and moderators in the relationship between violent media exposure and aggression.